

SNOOK WALKS CALMLY TO HIS DEATH

SLAYER SENDS LOVE TO WIFE; REVEALED HOPE FOR ETERNITY

Wife Kisses Snook Good-Bye But Faints After Parting

COLUMBUS, O., March 1.—"My love and affection for my wife" were among the last words of Dr. James H. Snook, who died in the electric chair at the Ohio State Penitentiary here last night for the murder of Miss Theora Hix.

The Reverend I. E. Miller, who remained with Snook until the end, told newspapermen:

"In his last moments, he spoke to me repeatedly of his love and affection for his wife."

"It's too bad it took a bump like this to make me realize how wonderful she was," Snook told me.

"He told me over and over again as the end neared that he had faith in God and absolute confidence in future life."

Mrs. Helen Marple Snook, the slayer's wife, now a widow, suffered a nervous breakdown. She remained in the death cell, where she and her husband had eaten their last meal together, until 6:40 o'clock—about twenty-five minutes before the ex-college professor was executed.

According to Rev. Miller, Dr. Snook kissed his wife good-bye.

Enroute through penitentiary corridors and headed for the outside of the prison, Mrs. Snook fainted. She was taken into the private apartment of Warden P. E. Thomas, where restoratives were administered to her.

When news of the execution flashed through the prison and Mrs. Snook heard a newspaper reporter shout: "Snook's dead," she suffered a complete collapse.

Though she regained her composure in about ten minutes, Mrs. Snook remained at the penitentiary for some time.

Curious crowds milled in the street outside, hoping to get a glimpse of the woman as she left the institution.

Wishing to spare Mrs. Snook from the ordeal of breaking through the crowds, Miss Amanda Thomas, daughter of the Warden, suggested a glimpse and it was carried out.

A woman friend of the widow put on heavy veils and left the front entrance of the penitentiary on the arms of two male companions. The crowd surged after the three and after they had made their escape from the crowd in an automobile, the curious dispersed.

Then, Mrs. Snook was able to leave the prison without being molested by the several hundred persons who had previously milled in the streets outside.

LABOR FEDERATION SAYS EMPLOYMENT DECREASES IN MONTH

Announcement On Heels
Of Optimistic Hoover

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Simultaneous with President Hoover's report that public utilities plan to spend $1,400,000,000 in plant construction during 1930 which will provide work for citizens in virtually every city and town in the country William Green, president, American Federation of Labor, issued a statement declaring unemployment increased two per cent during February.

Green said he based his conclusion on reports from twenty-four cities and said high percentages of unemployment were noted in New York, Chicago and St. Louis. In the latter two cities building trades men are suffering from lack of work.

Mr. Hoover's rather cheerful announcement was prepared by Matthew S. Sloan, chairman of the National Business Survey Committee on utilities expenditures. Sloan, president of the Brooklyn Edison Company, declared the expansion program of the gas, electric and utility corporations pledged to the president last November in order to provide work and maintain prosperity, has been considerably accelerated.

WASHINGTON STILL PESSIMISTIC OVER NAVAL CONFERENCE

Big Navy Group Is Alarmed By Reports
From London

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The sixth week of the London naval conference ended today with the five great powers that compose it apparently no nearer an agreement than they were when it started.

In fact, so pessimistic has Washington become over the delays, obstacles, and general course of the conference that there are many here who contend it has gone backward from its goal instead of toward it.

This feeling of pessimism, duly noted in these dispatches, is particularly apparent in the senate where it reached the surface yesterday in an open demand from Senator McKellar (D) of Tenn., that the American delegation be recalled.

McKellar contended the conference has already failed of the purpose for which President Hoover and Premier MacDonald initiated it, i. e., actual naval reductions, and that such being the case the United States would do well to withdraw. Furthermore, the Tennessee senator, who has been a vocal opponent of the bargaining that has been going on in London, and expressed the belief that the American navy would come out at the little end of the horn.

No other senator spoke in support of McKellar's view, but it is well known that not a few of his colleagues, both Republican and Democratic, privately share his views. And it was of more than passing significance that only one newcomer, ventured to reply publicly to McKellar's sweeping indictment of the whole business in London. The administration wheel horses, usually quick to defend administration policy, were silent.

"Big navy" contingent in the senate, which is a powerful and considerable factor, was further perturbed today by dispatches from London reporting that the American delegation, in negotiations with the Japanese, had tentatively offered to accept fifteen cruisers of the 10,000-ton, eight-inch gun class instead of the twenty-one or eighteen which figured in the Hoover-McDonald conversations on the Rapidan River last October.

The persistence with which rumors crop up and are cable from London that the American delegation is flirting with the idea of engaging in a security pact is disturbing to the senate irreconcilable. It is a reasonably safe prediction that no treaty embodying a security pact can be ratified in the senate.

Learn Agreement Was Made To Permit
Mind Changing

By HARRY R. FLORY

LONDON, March 1.—It can now be stated with practical certainty that the United States navy is likely never to have the full eighteen 10,000-ton cruisers which was envisaged in the tentative Anglo-American agreement for naval parity between the two nations.

It also can be revealed that the clause in the American memorandum, which was published at the conference here, early in February, providing the option for the United States and Great Britain to duplicate each other's cruiser fleet, was not designed as a sop to the British admiralty, as had hitherto been assumed, but was designed to provide a loophole for the American naval experts to change their minds.

This mind-changing related to the value and efficiency of these maximum size "Washington cruisers," leaving a loophole for the American experts to agree to limit this type of vessel to fifteen before the whole eighteen were built. The mind-changing process is now going on.

During the last week it is understood that the Americans and British resumed their discussions of battleships in an attempt to reach a tentative understanding, pending the finding of an agreement on other categories of naval vessels.

The project for a "super-Rodney" dreadnaught for the United States has been practically abandoned, the Americans having suggested other means of achieving real parity of the Anglo-American fleets, in addition to the proposal for the British scrapping five ships and the Americans three, in the near future.

An alternative to the United States' construction of a "super-Rodney" dreadnaught will probably be a suggestion for an amendment to the Washington treaty permitting the United States to modernize some of her present battleships.

At the abortive Geneva naval conference in 1927 the American naval experts insisted upon the right to utilize the entire cruiser tonnage of the "Washington cruisers," or the 10,000-ton vessel of this type. President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald, during their conferences in Washington and in President Hoover's fishing camp on the Rapidan, envisaged a fleet of twenty-one of this type of fighting ship, but this number was eventually cut at the London conference to eighteen.

At the same time, the United States was given the option of having only fifteen "Washington cruisers," utilizing the remainder of her cruiser tonnage in smaller vessels, armed with six-inch guns. It is doubtful if the American delegation to the London conference dares definitely to limit the number of "Washington" cruisers to fifteen at this conference, since the American public and the senate has been educated to believe that numerical superiority over Great Britain in this type of vessel is vital to the United States.

But, by 1935, when the next similar conference is envisaged, there seems to be little doubt that the American experts will agree that fifteen such vessels are adequate, if not excessive. By that date there seems to be no present likelihood that eighteen such ships will have been built.

TAFT DRAWING NEAR TO DEATH

FEMALE JEKYLL AND HYDE

Snook's Sweetheart-Victim Led Dual Life;
Famous Case Reviewed

By H. T. HOPKINS
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
COLUMBUS, O., March 1.—

Theora K. Hix, attractive 24-year-old Ohio State University coed, for whose fiendish murder Dr. James Howard Snook was sent to meet his final judge, via the electric chair at Ohio State Penitentiary Friday evening, was a female Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde.

As a medical student at the university, Miss Hix was known as not only a demure young lady, who was studious and ambitious, but she was also considered to be a hater of men.

Even the few persons who had known her intimately were additionally shocked when, following her murder, it developed that she had secretly posed—part of her time—as the wife of Snook in a "love nest" apartment.

And they, and others—many others, who knew Snook, a highly-esteemed professor of veterinary medicine at Ohio State University—were surprised when it was learned that the 50-year-old professor had established the "love nest" apartment for them not so very far from the university at which both were respected as upstanding folk of exemplary qualities. And the place where the college instructor and his youthful sweetheart, paramour frequently met, was not so far, either, from his own home, where Snook lived—most of the time—with his comparatively young wife, and their 2-year-old daughter.

It was on the morning of last June 14 that the body of this female Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde was discovered the day after the night of her gruesome slaying, among the weeds of a rifle range on the outskirts of Columbus. The body had been so brutally battered and disfigured that it was not until the following morning that it was identified as the remains of the girl whom people generally had known as Miss Theora Hix; as the one, the proprietor of the "love nest" apartment had known as "Mrs. Snook."

Investigators learned that the co-ed had last been seen entering a small blue coupe. The car was later traced to Dr. Snook, as a result of which the university teacher was taken into custody for investigation.

Following an almost incessant grilling of twenty-three hours, five days later, Snook, who had meant to place six federal prisoners with quantities of morphine hidden in their clothing, intimidated today that he hopes to break up what he believes to be a dope ring operating among federal prisoners.

Lachenauer said that dope has been smuggled to narcotic prisoners in the county jail here for the past three months. The method of the smuggling operations is not known exactly.

The first tip to federal agents came when a federal prisoner, confined with the narcotic prisoners, received a package of cigarettes containing dope. He immediately informed authorities and the raid resulted. The name of the prisoner who gave the information was withheld.

"We are now making efforts to find the persons who work for the narcotic prisoners on the outside," Lachenauer said.

The cash register of the reputed "joint" was rifled and the door of the establishment was looked from the inside. Police who are investigating the attack, believe Mische's assailant escaped through a cellar door.

Mische was in a critical condition in Warren City Hospital today and police have been able to obtain from him but little information regarding his assailant. Deep gashes and cuts on the man's scalp indicate that he had been struck with either a blackjack or a bottle.

Several years ago, Mische figured prominently in a police department scandal here. He was accused of having accepted a bribe and was later convicted on the charge and discharged from the police force.

EXPECT TWO OTHERS WILL DIE; ANOTHER SLIGHTLY WOUNDED

Dynamite House But
Killer Cheats Law
By Own Hand

DEFIANCE, O., March 1.—Two persons are dead here today, two others are in hospitals and are expected to die, and Police Chief Karl Weaner, is suffering from a light bullet wound as the result of the rampage of a deranged man here for three hours late yesterday. Dynamite, tear gas and machine guns were used to quell the maniac.

Henry Floehr, 60, former inmate of the Toledo State Hospital for the Insane, shot and killed his wife, Augusta, 55, and later committed suicide after battling for three hours with officers, Ohio National Guardsmen and private citizens.

William Chappel, 32, a volunteer officer, and Newell Littlefield, Defiance College student from Newport, Maine, were both seriously wounded in the exchange of shots. They are expected to die.

Floehr's irresponsible rampage is said to have started after he and his wife had quarreled over their daughter, Elsie Floehr, a school teacher. When William, 32, a son threatened to call the police, the man became deranged. He obtained a gun and fired at his son, who barely escaped being hit by the bullet. Next, Floehr turned the gun on his wife and shot and killed her.

Police were called and they arrived on the scene to find Floehr barricaded on the second floor of his home. After exchanging shots with the man, and failing to dislodge him with tear gas, the Ohio National Guard was called.

Troopers set up machine guns and pumped a relentless rain of bullets into the house. Still, Floehr continued to reply to the fire of the officers with his own weapon.

Meanwhile, about 3,000 persons had crowded to within a half block of the scene, and despite warnings of police that they were within the range of the maniac's gun, they refused to disperse. Littlefield was shot down as he stood watching the melee. The lives of many other persons were endangered.

Sheriff E. L. Partee, taking charge of the situation, ordered that some dynamite be procured. Eight sticks of the explosive were brought and the sheriff buried them into the house.

The report of the blast was heard in all sections of the city. The explosion virtually destroyed the entire second floor of the dwelling.

Officers rushed into the debris to find Floehr dead, not from the explosion, but a suicide victim. Floehr apparently had turned the gun on himself rather than surrender to police. His forehead was seared by powder burns. The man had previously shot his wife to death.

A "one pounder" was also used by guardsmen during the sensational gun battle, but it also failed to dislodge the man, though tearing gaping holes in the walls of the residence.

Floehr, officers discovered when they entered the house following the dynamite blast, had killed himself with his last bullet.

According to the son, William, his mother hit Floehr with a wet dish cloth, following a quarrel over their children. Maddened, Floehr immediately shot and killed his wife, William said.

STOLEN AUTOS USED FOR CRIME

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Automobile thieves steal 300,000 cars annually, and many of these machines go into service in liquor transportation, gang wars and bank robberies, the American Automobile Association estimated today.

Thomas P. Henry, president of the organization, has called the attention of this phase of crime to President Hoover's law enforcement commission.

"The car thief is a potent factor in aiding and abetting other criminals," he wrote George W. Wickersham, chairman of the law enforcement commission.

Henry urged the commission to recommend adoption of the uniform motor vehicle anti-theft act, pointing out that states where this law is not enforced were the "dumping grounds for stolen automobiles."

ADMITTED SLAYER OF

CO-ED PAYS PENALTY IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Execution Writes Final Chapter To Sordid Murder
Of Theora Hix; Wife, Wronged In Life,
Leads Husband To His Doom

By JOHN J. VINCENT

COLUMBUS, O., March 1.—The long-awaited finale of the sordid and sensational case of Dr. James H. Snook—the electrocution of the middle-aged ex-college professor for the brutal murder of Miss Theora Hix, 24-year-old co-ed—today had occurred.

Deliberately and unflinchingly, Dr. Snook strode to his death last night in the electric chair at the Ohio State Penitentiary here, where society and law had decreed he should die for the first-degree murder which he had perpetrated.

It was only while he was being strapped into the grim instrument of death, that he showed any signs of emotion. Then, he blinked his eyes rapidly, clenched his fists and bit his lower lip. He apparently was on the verge of a breakdown, but the steel nerve which he had often exercised throughout his trial for his life and his confinement in "death row" was exercised for the last time and he paid the supreme penalty without showing any sign of emotion.

When he strode into the death chamber, flanked by two guards, he did not look like the debonair college professor who had stood trial for the slaying of Theora Hix, his attractive co-ed sweetheart for the last time. Snook was dressed in a blue suit, which showed signs of wear. Covering his feet were white house slippers and there was a hole in the toe of the right one, and a white sock with a hole in the toe. His glasses, which he formerly lent a dignified appearance to the killer, were broken. The man had given room and board to Rev. I. E. Miller, his pastor, just before he took the "suicide" through "the little green door."

The 1,550 volts of electricity was sent into his body at 7:06 o'clock and he was officially pronounced dead by Dr. George W. Weil, prison physician, at 7:09 p. m.

When the current smote the doctor's body, it stiffened convulsively, and then slumped down into the chair. The lists drew up into knots and the bald head blistered horribly from the heat. Thin wisps of smoke curled up from the electrodes on his head and legs. The smell of burnt human flesh pervaded the chamber into which two score people had crowded to watch the man die.

"May God be with you" were the last words which the former college teacher heard on this earth. The Rev. Miller mumbled the short phrase just before the current blasted Snook's soul into eternity.

Snook and his wife, Mrs. Helen Marple Snook, the "wronged" woman in the case, had received communion from the Rev. Mr. Miller, pastor of a northside Methodist church, which the Snooks attended.

For the first time in the history of the penal institution here, a condemned man was allowed to share his last meal with his wife. It was served in the "death cell." Only a thickness of a wall separates that prison room from the "death chamber."

Besides Snook and his loyal wife, the Rev. Mr. Miller, the Rev. K. E. Wall, prison chaplain, Oscar Roedel, of Pomeroy, a former classmate of Dr. Snook, and Mrs. Frank Landrum, of Junction City, a cousin of Mrs. Snook, sat around the table at the last meal.

Rev. Miller gave the following statement to newspapermen: "We all ate heartily; there was no restraint. Dr. Snook ate a piece of fried chicken, two lamb chops, mashed potatoes, ice cream, cake and drank two cups of coffee. It was as if we were on a picnic."

Mrs. Snook spent the entire afternoon preceding the electrocution with her husband. She was there when Snook was transferred from "death row" to the "death cell." They walked arm in arm across a small prison courtyard and it was the first time since August 20, when the killer was incarcerated in "death row," that he had been out in the open air.

An old guard, according to Warden P. E. Thomas of the penitentiary, observed: "It is the first time that a woman has led her husband to his death."

SENTENCED TO PEN

MARYSVILLE, O., March 1.—LeRoy Alexander, 45, local printer, who was convicted of a statutory charge by a common pleas court jury today had been sentenced to serve from one to ten years in the Ohio State Penitentiary. He will appeal his case. His daughter, Frances, 19, faces a similar charge, police declared.

PITTSBURGH TAXI STRIKE CARRIES ON

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 1.—The taxicab strike here, which has already developed into fatal rioting and bloodshed, entered its seventh week today.

Settlement of the "war," appears to be as far away as it was when the strike first started. An offer of the companies was rejected by a 1,153-to-1 vote by the drivers yesterday.

"The battle is just as intense as ever," a member of the drivers' executive committee declared.

law enforcement commission.

Henry urged the commission to recommend adoption of the uniform motor vehicle anti-theft act, pointing out that states where this law is not enforced were the "dumping grounds for stolen automobiles."

He added: "I hope to announce my cabinet on Sunday."

TWO MYSTERY FIRES DESTROY BARN AND CONTENTS SATURDAY

Two fires of unknown origin, in which incendiaries may be suspected, destroyed two barns near Jamestown early Saturday morning.

A two-story frame barn on a farm owned by Mrs. F. W. Ogden, Springfield, located north of Jamestown and rented by W. S. Weimer, Jamestown, was completely destroyed with its contents by fire that was discovered about 3 o'clock Saturday morning.

Two mules and three head of cattle perished in the flames which also destroyed about 400 bushels of corn, several tons of hay and a number of farm implements. Loss sustained by the owners.

Another two-story frame barn on a farm owned by Dr. W. M. Henry, about a mile and one-half north of Jamestown, was destroyed with its contents about 7 o'clock in the morning. The contents included between 200 and 300 bushels of corn, a quantity of baled hay and oats. Origin is a mystery. Loss, which was not estimated, is protected by insurance on the barn but not its contents.

MARCH LION COMES

COLUMBUS, O., March 1.—The proverbial March lion stole into Ohio today and is expected to bluster about the state tonight bringing with it freezing temperatures. The weather report promises colder weather, so it will be the "lion" and not the "lamb" which will hold sway for at least two days.

THREE LODGED IN JAMESTOWN JAIL FOR HOUSE BREAKING

Three men who, while under the influence of liquor, are alleged by William A. Riggleman, 55, to have forced an entrance into his residence off N. Limestone St., in Jamestown after midnight Friday and threatened his life, are being held in village jail, following their arrest early Saturday morning by John Baughn, village marshal, on affidavits sworn out by Riggleman.

Arraigned Saturday morning before Mayor W. E. Reid on charges of breaking into the residence and threatening to kill, the trio entered not guilty pleas. Their hearing was held immediately but Mayor Reid deferred until Saturday night a decision as to their guilt or innocence.

Riggleman told authorities that he was in bed asleep when the three men, with whom he was acquainted, forced their way into the

JUDGE WILL DECIDE WHETHER COOPER'S TRIAL IS CHANGED

Decision as to the possibility of changing the date for the second trial of Gilbert Cooper, 50, formerly of Cedarville, on a charge of first degree murder, will be left to the judgment of Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy upon his return to Xenia March 10 from Cleveland, where he has been presiding for the last four weeks on the Cuyahoga County bench under an assignment of the chief justice of the Ohio Supreme Court.

This agreement was reached Friday at a conference between Prosecuting Attorney J. Carl Marshall and Attorney F. L. Johnson, defense counsel.

The re-trial of the case has been assigned for March 18 but a change in date is being considered because of the fact the Greene County Court of Appeals is scheduled to convene in Common Pleas Court March 19.

Prosecutor Marshall announced that there is a possibility the trial will begin on the date assigned and that it will be recessed on the following day while the appellate court is in session and then resumed the day afterward.

YOUTH RETURNED TO DAYTON; WILL FACE JUVENILE CHARGES

Because he is a ward of the Montgomery County Juvenile Court, Henry Milzer, 16, W. Third St., Dayton, one of two youths who confessed to stealing 1,600 pounds of iron valued at $1,800 from the car barns of the Dayton-Xenia Railway Co., February 22, was returned to Dayton Friday in the custody of Probation Officer J. E. Watts.

Milzer and John Edgington, 18, also of Dayton, had been brought from Dayton to Xenia Thursday night and lodged in the County Jail in default of $250 bond after being bound over to the grand jury on a larceny charge by R. E. Ferguson, Beaver Creek Twp., justice of the peace.

The youths readily admitted the theft of the iron, which was carried away in a truck, but denied breaking into the car barns. They said they gathered the metal off the ground.

Investigation disclosed both boys are on parole from the Lancaster industrial school and are wards of the Montgomery County Juvenile Court.

EDUCATOR SPEAKER OF DINNER MEETING OF CHURCH SOCIETY

Dr. H. J. Arnold, director of Wittenberg special schools, Springfield, addressed the Men's Brotherhood of the First Lutheran Church at the church, Friday evening. Members of Troop No. 45, Boy Scouts of America and Scout leaders were guests.

Dr. Arnold said: "The day is coming when man must use more brain power. We use only 10 per cent of our minds."

"The use of the rod is being outlawed and interest in the schools is being stimulated. We are spending more on schools than any other public project."

"Better ways of teaching are being formed and we are aiming at the democracy of education. The kind of outlook you have is the best means to the end, in education," Dr. Arnold said. "Mastery is what we want today. We have enough average in the world."

He illustrated the verse, "And Jesus grew in wisdom, stature and in favor with God and man," that a good education includes a good mental, physical, spiritual and social mind.

TOWN MOURNS MEAT WAGON DOG

BRIDGEPORT, O., March 1.—This town's most prominent dog, Ted, aged about twelve or fourteen years, is dead.

Many adults and youngsters are mourning the passing of the animal, which, for years, had followed a meat market wagon about town. The dog would frequently run ahead and herald the arrival of his owner by barking loudly.

He subsisted on bones and scraps tossed to him from the rig. Never had he attempted to steal from the wagon, observers say. The dog was always on hand on weekdays and disposed the belief that a dog doesn't know anything about Sunday by not showing up for "work" on the first day of the week.

Ted won't be forgotten. His hide is to be mounted. Friends arranged for that when it was proposed to have him buried.

VILLAGE SUED FOR DAMAGES TO AUTO BLAMED ON STREET

The village of Cedarville was named defendant in a suit demanding $350 damages filed in Common Pleas Court Friday by J. R. Herriott, who charges that his sedan, being driven along Barber St. in the village, by his employee, Robert Ferriman, last September 30, became unmanageable owing to the rough condition of the thoroughfare and was damaged to that extent when it was thrown into an abandoned stone quarry near Massie's creek.

Herriott sets forth that the street had been coated with crushed stone to a width of twenty feet and that right up to the brink of the quarry the street was worn and contained many holes and ruts. The village is charged with negligence in not providing a barrier or guard rail along the edge of the quarry and in not erecting signs warning motorists of the dangerous condition of the thoroughfare.

At the point where the sedan fell into the quarry there is a abrupt descent of twelve feet, a petition recites.

COUNTY DAIRY IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION LEADING STATE

The Greene County Dairy Improvement Association, with five gold medal herds, ranks as the leading association in the state in this respect, and tied with the Ottawa-Sandusky Association with an association average of 331.4 pounds butterfat production for the year 1929, according to E. A. Drake, County agent.

The gold medal herds are those averaging 400 or more pounds of butterfat per cow for the year, with all cows on test. They include the herds of Paul Ramsey with a 433 pound average, F. E. Wilson 428.9 pounds, L. H. Hartley 407.6 pounds, J. O. St. John 401.1 pounds and Venis Ary 400 pounds. Mr. Wilson, Mr. Ary and Mr. Ramsey will be eligible to membership in Ohio's honor club at its annual banquet next January. Mr. St. John and Mr. Hartley are already members of this club.

The herd of Raymond Wolf led the association in milk production with an average of 11,164 pounds per cow for the year. Frank Wolf was second with 10,552 pounds and W. N. Ankeney's herd ranked third with 10,469 pounds.

The value of milk and cream produced per cow per year was $205.20 as an average for the association. The herd of Guernseys belonging to L. H. Hartley averaged $229.96 per cow. Van Tress Bros. was second with $309.37 and

CERTIFY SIX FOR POLICE JOBS; SEVENTEEN TAKE EXAMINATION

Six out of seventeen applicants who took a civil service examination conducted Friday night in the offices of Attorneys W. L. Marshall and J. A. Finney in the Allen Building, were certified by the Civil Service Commission Saturday to City Manager M. C. Smith as eligible for appointment to two positions as city patrolmen on the Xenia Police Department.

Two appointments from this eligibility list are expected to be made sometime next week by Manager Smith, conforming with terms of an ordinance recently passed by City Commission, providing for a re-organization of the police force, effective, Saturday, March 1.

The highest grade of all the applicants was obtained by Captain Ozni H. Cornwell, 36 Chestnut St., commandant of Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, and formerly county road patrolman and military instructor at the O. S. and S. O. Home.

Captain Cornwell received a grade of 95 out of a possible 100. Prior to coming to Xenia he had eighteen months experience as a sergeant in the Marion, O., police department.

Ancl Stephens, 220 Pleasant St., former city patrolman, who at one time served one year on the force, received the second highest grade. The four other applicants certified to the city manager are: Walter D. Leopold, 434 S. Detroit St.; Walter Carey Jones, 209 Bellbrook Ave.; Peter Shagin, present motorcycle policeman, and Elwood S. Smith, baker.

Shagin, who has acted as motorcycle policeman for the last six years, is not under civil service and was also required to take the examination in order that he may be eligible for appointment as a regular patrolman assigned to the duties of a traffic officer. A Serbian, he served in the army during the late war and received his honorable discharge.

Elwood Smith, another of the successful applicants, is a son of the late Ed M. Smith, who for many years was chief of police of Xenia.

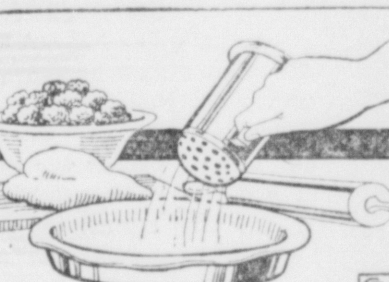

Walter Jones was in the United States marine service for four years during the World War and is now associated with the National Cash Register Co., Dayton, while Leopold, former Pennsylvania Railroad employee, is now employed at the Xenia Steamery of the American Cigar Co.

Eleven other applicants who took the examination were: William R. Muterspaugh, John Stephens, Ernest Haines, William Dorton, Glenn McFadden, Sylvester Dakin, Bert Driscoll, Donald Dalton, Alfred H. Creamer, Howard Burgett and Elbert M. Lemlin.

Under the re-organization plan one new patrolman will be added to the present force, making eight in all. The ordinance also provides for creation of the position of day desk man at Police Headquarters.

Attorney W. L. Miller, T. J. Kennedy and Edward Wood compose the Civil Service Commission.

WATCH for the car with the GOLDEN ROCKET and ask for a demonstration

On the streets of this city today is the Oakland Eight demonstrator, marked on either side by a large GOLDEN ROCKET. The driver is ready to stop and give you a demonstration.

The GOLDEN ROCKET is a symbol of tremendous speed and power. And these are also characteristics of the New Oakland Eight. Its 85-horsepower eight-cylinder engine develops one horsepower to every 37 pounds of car weight. That is why few cars can equal its remarkable speed, pass it on the hills, or match its pick-up in traffic. Watch it for a few minutes, and you will know why it is called "the car with superior performance." Signal the driver for a demonstration—or come to our showroom. Learn that the New Oakland Eight is not only fast and powerful, but unusually smooth. See its new, smartly styled Fisher bodies. Then you'll know that General Motors' new eight offers a high degree of owner satisfaction at an extremely moderate price!

The New Oakland Eight, $1045 and up, f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan, plus delivery charges. Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers included in list prices. Buipers, rear fender guards and spring covers extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list (f. o. b.) price when comparing automobile values. Oakland Pontiac delivered prices include only authorized charges for freight and delivery and the charge for any additional accessories or financing desired.

Until December 19th, 1929, Quaker Hill near Baltimore had never been climbed in high gear by any closed car carrying five passengers, according to all available records. On that day a New Oakland Eight accomplished this dramatic feat, presenting additional proof of its right to be called the car with superior performance."

BRITTEN vs. BRITAIN

A fear that the London conference may end in "a diplomatic victory at the expense of our national defense" apparently was behind Congressman Britten's uncalculated attack on the British admiralty. What Mr. Britten thinks or says, as a citizen, wouldn't be worth cabling to London. What Congressman Britten, as chairman of the house naval affairs committee, says is quite a different thing. The position he holds decorates his words with an importance out of all proportion to their intrinsic value.

The British admiralty doubtless is looking out for what it regards as Great Britain's best interests. Are not the American delegates in London doing much the same thing for our interests? The insinuation that the British admiralty is "scheming to give us the worst of it" will not smooth the troubled waters through which the conference is toiling. While it is human to assume that we alone are sincere in the desire for naval reduction, we can afford to be charitable enough to give other nations credit for equal sincerity. We can't afford to accuse others of duplicity or sharp practice, when they are merely looking out for their interests, as we insist on doing for our interests. Chairman Britten's contribution to the London conference, which he foresees to failure, could well have been spared.

IMMIGRATION CUTS

Australia has just cut its immigration quotas in half; and in South Africa an even more drastic measure has reached its second reading, with overwhelming approval. The latter limits to fifty the number of immigrants who may enter the union of South Africa annually from any country outside the British commonwealth or the United States or a dozen Nordic countries in northern Europe.

Agitators against the relatively mild limitations the United States has placed upon assimilable immigration are recommended to ponder these Australian and South African enactments. They are justified on precisely the same ground upon which our own legislation rests. A new country has the same right as an old and congested one to protect itself from submergence by outsiders. The right is inherent in the larger right of self preservation.

All nations exclude undesirables. As far as this country is concerned any person is undesirable who does not fit easily into the established scheme of things political, social or economic. A stream that challenges our political institutions or depresses our economic standards is as much a menace to the nation as one that pollutes its social wells.

Over-populated nations, which receive from the law of supply and demand the protection we must derive from statute, are loath to admit our right to limit the immigration of their nationals; but their reluctance to admit it in no wise impairs the validity of that right.

The price of gold fish suggests there may be something in a name, after all.

After the failure of the arbiters of fashion to put over the long skirt, who will say that women do not attire themselves to please men?

A suggestion that women be exempted from capital punishment in England has brought a storm of protest from the feminists. They insist that "women have as much right to be hanged as men." The idea that woman can't be logical is out of date.

MISSIONS

Those who criticize the spending of money for foreign missionary work are usually those who know little about missions. They think of a missionary as a sanctimonious, black-coated, high-hatted person who is bent on making the African native believe something he cannot understand. The modern missionary is a leader, a leader who opens the eyes of those who have blindly followed cruel customs and savage superstitions. Medical missionaries have changed the world for multitudes of people. The African witch doctor, travelers tell us, is going out of business. The sick native is losing his faith in witchcraft. He wants to consult a physician. He wants to know. Missionaries today are teachers and builders more than they are preachers.

THE HOME

Where is home? A report made by a large religious organization deals with the passing of the American home. Has it passed? It is said the home in most communities has ceased to be the unit of human association. It was once the place where food and clothing were produced. Home was the social unit. Life began and ended there. There are reasons why the situation has changed. The growth of cities and the crowding of homes into apartments; the migration of women from the home into shops, offices and stores. These things and other things have changed the American home. In thousands of instances they have destroyed it.

But a report of social workers is likely to make things look worse than they are. What is said of the cities is partly true. There are, on the other hand, thousands of small towns and villages in this country where the home has not changed so much. It is, of course, not like the pioneer home, producing food and clothing, but it is still the main gathering place of the family. People even spend evenings in the small town or farm home. The home, for the most part, has not gone out, and will not go out for a long, long time. When it does, what we know as civilization will go with it.

ONE WHO KNOWS

People who do not make money and have not the ability to make money are frequently those who like to preach that money has little to do with success. It is more interesting to hear from an expert as to what is worth working for in this life. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., whose income tax runs into the millions and whose income is beyond the conception of the average man, says as follows:

"In this money making age we do well to remind ourselves that after all the real purpose of our existence is not to make a living but to make a life—a worthy, well-rounded and useful life."

These may be taken as the words of an expert.

BIRDS AND GOLF

Many will note with pleasure the movement of the National Association of Audubon Societies to get golf clubs to build bird houses and do everything possible to attract birds to golf courses and preserve them there. Good idea. Excellent idea. A golf course needs something more than golf to make it attractive.

THE QUESTION BOX

CENTRAL PRESS WASHINGTON BUREAU

"Why does not the United States join the League of Nations?" asks a Question Box reader. "Has the Monroe Doctrine anything to do with preventing it?"

American objections to entering the League of Nations have been based thus far on the argument that the United States would be unwise to obligate itself to exercise a voice or perhaps take a more active share in overseas controversies in which this country may be not at all or very little interested. Equally, the objectors do not want to give other countries a right to interfere in new world affairs. To that extent the Monroe Doctrine has something to do with the matter.

How many $1 bills bearing Martha Washington's picture have been issued? Are they now worth more than their face? Of the 1898 series of $1 silver certificates, bearing Martha Washington's portrait, 72,484,000 were issued. The treasury department has no information as to their numismatic value. The American Numismatic Society, Broadway and 136th street, New York City, is the best authority on the subject.

LO, THE TRUCK DRIVER

NEW YORK CITY, New York.—A Tribute to the Truck Driver: The truck driver, long the symbol of all that was rough in modernism, is due to undergo considerable softening.

"Few people have realized," according to a motor truck ad, "that there was good reason for the truck driver's temperament. His vehicle rode like a donkey. The seats were hard. After the brakes required full strength pressure. As a day companion, it was a great thing to ruin the disposition. But now, all bodies are streamlined, with accommodations as comfortable as any passenger car. The coloring is appealing, the driving effort has been reduced to a minimum and the metal parts in the cab interior are chromium plated."

All that may help, but personally I doubt it. After a long experience with truck drivers on the open road my belief is that no mechanical, metallic or chromatic refinement is of potency sufficient to soften the robust effluvia of his spoken thoughts, or to disengage his attitude from the easy air of the slum barroom.

Which, after all, is as it should be. May I never live to see the day of the emasculation of the American truck driver. May I never live to see the day when even the merest are will be stripped from his Elizabethan breath of parlance. May I never live to see the day when, in answer to my modest query: "Where do you think you're going?" he will reply in other than quaint, robust, venerable, pious and mysterious syllables—sharp-proved words that cut the sea of sound, leaving a wake of foam behind!

HIS ARCH OF TRIUMPH

Good Cheer in Naval Circles As Obstacles Confront Parley

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—A couple of German cruisers (one about 30 per cent completed; the other in blue print form, not even authorized by the reichstag yet) are the twin obstacles in the way of some sort of agreement upon armament limitation (if not reduction) at the five-power conference in London, now getting on into its second month—with no satisfactory end in sight.

Anyway this is how our naval folk in Washington sense the situation. It is no exaggeration to state that it makes them grin—that is to say, those below the rank of admiral or thereabouts. An admiral is too conspicuous to grin (visibly) in happy anticipation of the failure of a conference which the administration is so anxious to have succeed.

It stands to reason that a man who has chosen a career as a sea fighter for himself (and maybe has spent a lifetime in it, and knows nothing about anything else) does not like the idea of having his profession scrapped. The average visage one glimpses in the corridors of the navy department building was far from cheerful during the early days of the London conference. As Rear Admiral Samuel S. Robinson expressed it (in a burst of confidence at a meeting of the eastern D. A. R.) the prospect of sailing a "treaty ocean in a treaty ship, with a treaty armament and a treaty crew" did not "set" very well.

However, naval sentiment has been much more optimistic since Senator David A. Reed, of the American delegation at the London gathering, spoke by radio from the English capital a few nights ago, outlining the negotiations thus far.

At Geneva, in 1927, said the Pennsylvania senator, indications were that it would cost the United States $600,000,000 in new war vessels to limit Uncle Sam's navy to an equality with John Bull's. As a result of this year's conference, he predicted, it will be possible to do it at a cost of only $450,000,000.

While admitting that $150,000,000 is a substantial cut, naval men are disposed to console themselves with the thought that the reduced figure is still close enough to half a billion not to mean utter despair. Besides, it is far from certain that the $150,000,000 can be saved.

Germany, having been ruled out of naval competition almost completely (as was supposed), by the Versailles treaty, gets into the experts' calculations rather peculiarly.

Little 10,000-ton cruisers are all the Heines are permitted to build—small potatoes alongside 33,990-ton battleships of the Rodney class.

What the Versailles treaty makers appear to have forgotten was that the Germans might think up a pattern of 10,000-ton cruiser fit to make all the rest of the world's 10,000-tonners look like 30 cents. In "Substitute A" (better known as the "Ersatz Preussen" but not really named), now under construction, and in a yet more formidable "Ersatz" designated as "Substitute B," already planned but not laid down, this is just what the diabolically efficient Teutons seem to have done.

But (asks some curious person) inasmuch as Ersatz A is not half finished, and Ersatz B is not so much as begun, how does anyone know that they will be such wonders, when actually in commission?

Oh, they cannot help it, built the way the Ersatz A is, being built—and as the Ersatz B is to be built, with improvements.

The method is simplicity itself. A child can understand it, now that it has been demonstrated, just as Ferdinand and Isabella's courtiers realized it was no trick whatever to make an egg stand on end when Columbus showed them how.

The modern man-o-war always has consisted of a framework riveted together, with armor plates riveted around it outside. The Germans hit on the scheme of dispensing with the rivets and welding everything to gether, all in one solid piece. The thing is beginning to be done on steel buildings, but it never has been tried on ships before.

In the first place, it dispenses with a lot of rivets. In effect, according to experts, it makes a 10,000-tonner the equivalent of 11,400 tons.

It also makes her vastly stronger—so much so that it appears it will be possible to equip the two Ersatz's with 11-inch guns, as compared with 8 inches, which always has been considered the maximum for 10,000-tonners heretofore.

Armed with her 11-inch battery, an Ersatz can shoot an enemy 10,000-tonner to pieces from so far away that the latter's 8-inch ordnance cannot hit the Ersatz at all.

The Ersatz can stand a heap more pounding than a ship held together only by rivets. Nevertheless, it is not claimed for her that she can sink a battleship of more than three times her weight, but her speed is so great that she can run rings around this class of vessel and still get away.

Such is the Ersatz Preussen, concerning which we have heard so much. The Ersatz C, from all accounts, is to be an improvement in that, in her case, a few pots and pans are to be welded fast to her framework, which were overlooked on the Ersatz Preussen and left detached, to knock around.

As the navy department gets the story, these two Ersatz's (and what may follow) constitute the goblin which frightened the French into insisting on the biggest sea establishment their taxpayers can stagger under, unless the United States and Britain promise to rush to their aid the instant Germany gives them a cross look—a bargain the American delegates know it would be hopeless to ask the senate to in-

And if France insists on so big a navy, then England must have a bigger one, and then the United States, and then Japan, and so on.

Hence good cheer in naval circles, which would vote a medal to Germany if she dared.

Peter's Adventures
By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

A HARD-SHELLED BABY
"Good gracious, who is that?" Peter pointed to a group of funny little creatures that looked like nothing he had ever seen unless—Peter stared. Yes, the queer things made him think of nuts, nuts on legs! No two of the little creatures were shaped just alike—one was fat, one was thin; this one had three corners, this one had four. Some were green, some were brown. A few hopped. More jumped. Others leaped over each other.

"Hop-o-my-thumbs!" cried Peter. "Say, Biffer, what can it be that those two are carrying between them?"

Peter's question was answered by a squeaky little voice. One of the nuts on legs was speaking. "Bet you a blade of grass, not many of you have ever seen a Frog-Hopper baby. We've brought one along. He's asleep in his foam cradle." Biffer, master of ceremonies whenever he had a chance to be leaned over and brushed the foam aside and, sure enough, there was a tiny creature sleeping so sweetly he neither knew nor cared what was going on about him.

"I'm not going to tell you what the foam is made of, nor how we make it," continued the funny Frog-Hopper. "Some folks say 'tis the juice we've sucked from a plant, others are sure it is a sort of glue we manufacture. You may make any guess you please, the truth is our secret. I will tell you this much, however. By and by the foam will harden, will make a shell for baby. Then one fine day little Frog-Hopper will wake up and grow angry at finding himself sealed up tight. 'Crack!' will go the hard shell. Out will pop little Frog-Hopper, a little bug in a great big world."

Next: "Hop-o-My-Thumb."

Ultra Violet Rays

"Dear Doctor: What is your opinion of the ultra violet rays in the carbon arc lamps? Do these take the place of sunshine?" MRS. W.

I think the purchase of one of the ultra violet ray machines for the home is a wise investment, if you realize its possibilities of danger and its limitations.

There is no doubt that in the winter, when there is much less sunshine, and especially in the cities where the smoke and fog (together known as smog) filter out a large part of these rays, these lights will be beneficial. It should be remembered that they should be used only as preventives of diseases and maintainers of health, rather than as curative agencies, they should be used only by a physician versed in their use.

When used simply as sunshine, in a general way, these lamps are beneficial. Remember that just as sunshine can produce burning, so can these, and the exposure to their rays should be at some distance and begun for a few minutes a day and very gradually increased. As the rays are more concentrated than the direct sunlight, exposure should never be very long. It is best to have a physician who understands their use to supervise you at first.

It has been found that after two weeks of concentrated exposure, the resisting power of the blood is lowered, so it would look as though intervals without their use would be wise—intervals of a week or so. Those who have studied this question believe that these lights should not be bought unless they are prescribed by a physician and directions given for their use.

No, these lamps are not as good as natural sunlight, for when one is getting real sunshine he is out of doors and getting other factors—fresh air and other rays of the sun that improve the condition and resistance. It is only in diseased conditions where the concentrated rays are necessary as a remedial agent, that this would not apply.

Mrs. P.: The termination of this in a word means that the condition is an inflammation. Pyelitis is an inflammation of the pelvis of the kidney, that part which first receives the urine filtered out from the blood as it is passed through the kidney structure.

This inflammation may be due to extension of inflammation of other parts of the urinary tract, or from stones; it may be due to infectious diseases. Apparently, it sometimes arises in children from allowing them to sit on cold floors and, chilling. Wrong diet and other unhygienic habits that lower the body resistance naturally favor inflammation in the kidney and elsewhere.

The diagnosis is made by examination of the urine. Usually the urine must be put to bed and kept quiet and warm, given large amounts of water and fruit juices to keep the urine copious and non-acid. Sometimes medications are prescribed.

Our pamphlet on Kidney and Bladder Disorders takes up other disorders of the urinary tract. See column rules for obtaining them.

M. G. R.: Do your best to forget the troubles of your childhood. Realize that your father, for some reason, was not mentally right, and so was unaccountable for his actions, and be charitable. It is only by taking this attitude that you will get over this psychic injury.

Mrs. J.: Our pamphlet on Hygiene of Women gives the home treatment for that slight discharge you speak of.

Tomorrow: Diet After Sickness.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column in their turn. Requests for articles or pamphlets on hand must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope, plus the following "mail charge to help cover cost of printing and handling": for each article wanted, two cents in coin; for each pamphlet ten cents in coin. The pamphlets are "Reducing and Gaining Weight," "Women, Kidney and Bladder Disorders." Address Dr. Peters, in care of this paper. Write legibly, and not over 200 words.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: I have a friend who loves and idolizes her husband, and has always been true to him. For 20 years they have been everything to each other, have been pals and sweethearts. Some time ago he fell in love with another woman and wants to divorce his wife and marry her.

"My friend is broken hearted. She has pleaded and prayed and done everything to get him to give this woman up, but he is determined not to.

"Don't you think a man would be ashamed to take the marriage vows for another woman when he had one that was true as steel?

"Virginia, don't you think it would be a very unhappy marriage? I do. I think there is something lacking and a man should be judged insane. I don't know what should be done to a woman who would break another's heart and home.

"JANE."

It is queer that a woman can excuse herself for breaking another woman's heart and home, isn't it? And that she can contemplate marriage with a man who, after years of companionship with his wife, leaves her for another. One would think the other woman would always be in terror that he might meet some one else and would again fall in his allegiance.

There is no use trying to hold a man under those circumstances. Much better hide the hurt and let him go. But I do think there should be no hurry. A man owes it to his wife to give her time to adjust herself to the change in her position and himself time to be as sure as he can under the circumstances that he really does love this other woman.

Usually, it is infatuation, rather than love, a man or woman will feel for someone other than their wife or husband. And part of the allure is that they are "stepping out" of the regular paths in which they have always trod. They have reached the "dangerous age" and life has become too humdrum and they feel the need of a thrill. The outsider gives it to them and they think they are in love and want to break up their home and marry this new companion.

It is quite probable that your friend's husband will not be happy with this woman and will want to come back to her. He probably has no idea of how much a part of him his wife of 20 years has become, and how he depends on her understanding of him and his ways. But that possibility does not, of course, save her present heart break and loss of confidence or help her to make a home for herself without a mate. That sort of thing is hard enough when a loved companion dies, but how much harder when he is unfaithful.

JEANINE: One has to act as their nature dictates. Jeanine. You probably feel happier waiting until this boy comes back after his brief flirtation with others. I think, however, that he would probably have fewer affairs with others if you did "step out on him."

PUZZLED: It is all right to ask any boy with whom you are friendly to a party. And when you meet him at such a time you can be friendly and show you like him, but let the boy ask you for a date if he wants one.

"Miss Virginia Lee: Who is right? A claims that by way of becoming acquainted or taking the first step, the parents of the young man should first call on the young lady's parents when young people become engaged. B claims it's the girl's parents that take the step. A is right.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

I CANNOT remember ever having received a request for advice on developing hips, so this article will deal entirely with reducing.

The exercises are to be done briskly and for best results, followed first by a hot water sponge bath and a cold shower.

One. Stand erect, hands on hips, heels together. Slide the right foot out in front, toe pointed and leg muscles well stretched. Describe a wide circle on the floor with the tip of the toe, moving sideways, back, and then around to the starting position. Four times.

Two. Rotate the leg from the hip, bending the knee a little at the backward movement. Repeat six times.

Three. Stand erect with one foot well in advance of the other. Swing body forward and down, allowing arms to hang relaxed to the floor. Raise the body and arms and bend back as far as possible, bending the knees a little and keeping muscles relaxed.

Slowly raise the body to an erect position, rise on the toes and stretch upward, contracting the abdominal muscles and raising chest as you inhale. Repeat six times.

Four. Raise the right leg far out behind and bend the body forward. Your right arm will be stretched out in front, the left arm backward. Have the right leg turned so that knee and toe are facing outward and not down. Stretch the foot feeling your muscles tensed all the way from hip to ankle. Return to erect, starting position, repeating this backward kick with the alternate leg.

Five. Lie on your back on the floor and raise and lower both legs as far up and over your head as you can manage. In about six days you should reach the floor behind with your toes. This is excellent not only for the hips, but for the waist also.

Six. Lie on the floor and work first one leg and then another, in a downward, circular movement leading with the knee. This is exactly the motion you would use in working a bicycle. Do it first slowly, then rapidly for as long as you can.

Seven and last. Roll! As long as much and as often as you can!

BUCCANEERS FAIL TO OVERCOME EARLY LEAD IN OVERTIME TILT

"Blue Lions" Assume Leadership While Xenia's Subs Perform; Teams Even On Fielders But League Winners Lose At Foul Line; Hurley Stars

THANKS to a timely basket by Anschultz, forward, in the last ten seconds of a three-minute overtime period, Washington C. H. High basketballers annexed a 23 to 21 surprise victory over Xenia Central High "Buccaneers" in the extra season, was most inopportune in for both teams Friday night on the Armory floor at Washington.

From Xenia's standpoint the winning basket, the only points scored by either team in the extra season, was most inopportune inasmuch as Anschultz had previously been held without a single field goal throughout the game.

Coach "Pinky" Wilson elected to start Dice at forward in place of Dalton and Thompson at guard instead of Price and the "Blue Lions" had staked themselves to a substantial lead by the time the two regulars were inserted into the contest.

Washington led, 7 to 1 at the close of the first period, Xenia's only point of the opening quarter being a free throw by Hurley. Anschultz looped in two foul shots and Captain Noon registered a basket and a free throw to give Washington a 5 to 0 advantage at the offset. After Hurley broke the ice with a charity marked Sever contributed another fielder for Washington.

Both teams scored four points in the second stanza, giving Washington a 13 to 5 lead when the half ended. Anschultz started off the second period with a foul shot and Hurley came through with Xenia's only basket of the first half, Noon retaliated with a two-pointer for the Blue Lions. Free throws by Thompson, Dalton and Noon in the order named completed the first half scoring.

Freddie Dalton had been substituted for Dice at the close of the first period but Lester Price did not take Thompson's place in the lineup until the first half was almost over.

With the regular lineup intact, the Bucs set about the task of overhauling Washington in the second half and reduced the lead to two points in the third quarter as a result of scoring six points while holding the Blue Lions to two markers in this period.

The outlook was black in the early part of the stanza because Noon started off with a foul to increase his team's margin to seven points. At this point the Bucs snapped out of it and a basket by Price and a foul by Dalton whittled Washington's margin to four points. Anschultz contributed a free throw but Bell duplicated from the charity line and Hurley sank a basket, cutting the lead to two points at the close of the third period.

The fourth quarter was particularly exciting and the score was tied no less than five different times during this session. Xenia drew up on even terms with Washington for the first time during the game on another fielder by acting Captain Hurley after which the Bucs went ahead momentarily on a foul shot by Bell. Noon tied up matters again on a free throw but another foul throw by Bell broke the deadlock.

Once again the count was knotted on a charity throw by Sever for Washington. This was the signal for a Washington rally and baskets by Captain Noon and Sever followed in quick succession. But the Bucs were not discouraged and quickly pulled back on an even basis on successive baskets by Hurley and Smittle. In the closing minute Noon sank a fielder for Washington and Bell came back with his only basket of the game that evened the count at the end of the regulation playing period.

This opportune fielder sent the game into an overtime three-minute session in which Xenia failed to score a single point and Anschultz shot the winning basket in the last ten seconds.

Scoring nine points, Captain Hurley was high scorer for Xenia followed by Bell with five counts. The postmarking of Noon, Washington captain, was largely responsible for his team's victory as he collected twelve points.

Both teams showed a deadly eye for the basket from the foul line, Washington making nine out of twelve shots good while Xenia missed only three out of ten free throws. Actually, however, Xenia lost the game from the free throw mark as each team made seven baskets.

The defeat which brought to a close Xenia's 1929-30 court schedule, was more or less unexpected in view of the fact Washington finished in the cellar in the South Central Ohio League. The Blue Lions did not perform like last-placers Friday night, however.

The Bucs were handicapped to some extent by the low ceiling and rafters which prevented any long-range shooting. It was necessary to penetrate inside the foul line before taking a shot at the hoop. The season ended inauspiciously for the Bucs but it was nevertheless a successful season, the record showing ten victories against only five defeats. All that remains is the regional tournament at Dayton next Friday and Saturday. The lineups:

FAVORITES SURVIVE IN COUNTY MEET

TOURNEY GAMES RUN ACCORDING TO FORM IN OPENING ROUNDS

Ross' Chances Hurt By Accident In First Contest

(BULLETIN)
Spring Valley boys' basketball team, defending champion, won its way into the finals of the tourney by defeating Bowersville, 18 to 16 in an overtime semi-final game. At the end of the game the score was tied, 16 to 16, and H. Huff, guard, flipped in the winning basket with twenty seconds left to play in the three-minute extra session. Bowersville led at the half, 9 to 4.

(Bulletin)
Although the score was tied at 25 to 25 at the end of the game, the Bryan High School girls' team of the Yellow Springs was awarded the victory in its semi-final round game with Beavercreek Jassies in the county tournament Saturday afternoon and will therefore participate in the finals of the female division. Under girls' basketball rules no overtime period can be played if two teams are tied at the end of the contest. Because Yellow Springs scored twelve field goals against ten for Beavercreek, it was awarded the game. The score at the half was 14 to 13 in Bryan High's favor.

Spring Valley, defending champion, Bowersville, Cedarville and Ross Twp. boys' team survived the preliminary rounds and won their way into the semi-finals of the sixth annual Greene County Class B basketball tournament Friday at Xenia Central High gymnasium.

In the female division, Yellow Springs, Beavercreek, Ross Twp. and Bellbrook girls will participate in the semi-final round of the tourney.

The early rounds were strangely devoid of the usual tournament upsets with the possible exception of Bowersville boys over Bryan High, or Yellow Springs, gained after an overtime period.

In the semi-finals of the boys' division Spring Valley was scheduled to meet Bowersville at 2 p. m. Saturday while Ross Twp. plays Cedarville at 4:30 p. m. The semi-final winners will compete in the championship finals at 8:30 p. m.

Yellow Springs was called to oppose Beavercreek in the first semi-final girls' game at 1 p. m. while Bellbrook girls, title winners last year, will play Ross Twp. at 3 p. m. The finals in the female class will be played at 7:30 p. m.

Minus the services of Jerome Pitstick, star forward, who suffered a broken left ankle in the first round game with Jamestown Friday morning, the Ross Twp. boys' quintet was extended to the limit to win its second round game from Bellbrook, runnerup for the county title last year. After trailing by a few points throughout most of the game, Ross rallied in the last quarter and nosed out a 23 to 20 victory. Bellbrook had a 22 to 11 advantage at the half. Swain, center, scored eleven points for the winners and McHenry and Barton each tallied six for Bellbrook. In the first round Ross had eliminated Jamestown, 35 to 20.

Led by Harris, forward, who registered six baskets, Cedarville boys triumphed over Beavercreek as expected, 33 to 22.

Spring Valley boys, defending champs, were given a stiff battle by Caesar Creek in the first half which ended with the title holders on the short end of a 17 to 15 score. In the second half Spring Valley asserted itself and rolled up a 44 to 29 victory with Turner, guard, scoring sixteen points.

A basket by Smittle, center, in a three-minute overtime period enabled Bowersville boys to vanquish Yellow Springs, 26 to 25 in possibly the most exciting game during the day.

The female division games also ran true to form. Bellbrook girls, unbeaten in two years, won their twenty-ninth and thirtieth straight victories to reach the semi-finals, defeating Jamestown, 34 to 8 and Cedarville, 20 to 15. Cedarville last year's put up a great struggle all the way.

In the other second round girls' games, Yellow Springs, favored to reach the finals, eliminated Bowersville, 26 to 7, while Beavercreek defeated Spring Valley, 32 to 21, and Ross Twp. beat Caesar Creek, 24 to 21.

GIRL PLAYER HURT
MARY Linton, forward on Bowersville girls' basketball team was another casualty of the Class B county tournament play on the opening day Friday when she sustained a fractured right arm in the game with Bryan High School Jassies of Yellow Springs. The arm was fractured midway between the wrist and the elbow. Bowersville was eliminated from the tourney, 2 to 7. Dr. R. L. Haines, Jamestown physician, was busily engaged all day Friday patching up less serious injuries of other athletes, girls as well as boys, indicating that the popular indoor sport is not as harmful as some people think.

CEDARVILLE BOYS TO FIND AY

CEDARVILLE BOWS TO FINDLAY IN FINAL HOME GAME 36 TO 23

Cedarville College's basketball team closed its "at home" schedule by bowing to Findlay College basketballers, 36 to 23 in a return game Friday night at Alford gymnasium.

Leading throughout the game, with a margin of 19 to 13 at the half, the Orangemen obtained revenge for a defeat inflicted by the Yellow-Jackets earlier in the season before Smith, center, and Allen, forward, dropped out of school.

The Borstmen, however, showed a distinctly improved brand of ball and provided stiffer opposition than had been expected.

Moore, forward, with ten points, was high scorer for the Hancock County lads, while Turner, forward, led the Cedarville scoring with thirteen points.

The contest marked the last home appearance of Gordon and Marshall, Cedarville guards, who are seniors.

Cedarville will close its schedule in a return game with Urbana Junior College on the Urbana floor next Tuesday night. The lineups:

BELL, SMITTLE AND HURLEY WIN BERTHS AMONG LOOP LUMINARIES

Bell, Chosen Second Time, Is Only Unanimous Choice; Hoover, Troy Forward, And C. Weaver Miami Springs Guard, Get Places

BY PHIL FRAME
HAMPIONS of the Miami Valley League for the third consecutive year, Xenia Central High School's basketball team merited three players on the annual mythical all-league first team selected by means of a poll conducted by The Gazette of the coaches of the six member schools composing the league.

Birch Bell at forward, John Hurley at center and Joe Smittle at guard are the three Buccaneers who, by their outstanding play in league competition, earned the distinction of being chosen for berths on the all-star quintet.

Hoover, stellar Troy player, was selected for the other forward post, and C. Weaver, Miami Springs, qualified for the remaining guard station, completing, in the opinion of the coaches, a quintet that sizes up as the cream of basketball material developed in the league during the season just closed.

Miami Springs also rates two positions and Piqua, Sidney and Troy, one each on the second all-star five. Greenville, which finished in a three-way tie for second place in the league standing, is the only school not represented on either mythical aggregation, possibly because it was a team so well balanced that there were no individual stars who drew special attention to themselves.

A point system, under which a player awarded a first team choice received two votes and for the second team, one point, prevailed in selecting the personnel of the two teams.

Birch Bell, Xenia junior and flashy forward, who finished in second place in the list of individual scorers in the league, was the only player who was an unanimous choice of the coaches for the first team. Each of the six coaches believed him entitled to membership on the all-star quintet. Bell, it will be recalled, also was placed at forward on the all-league first team last year in the poll taken by The Gazette of the sport scribes of the league.

Hoover, Troy forward, and Smittle, Xenia guard, each received eleven out of a possible twelve votes, lacking only one point of being unanimous choices.

Hurley, Buccaneers pivot man, who was the league's high individual scorer, received nine votes, sufficient to place him at the tip-off position on the first team. He had a two-point margin over Kretzer, Sidney's veteran center, who was placed on the second team.

Everhart, sophomore Greenville star, who was placed at forward on the all-league second team last year when he was a freshman, received only two points. Next year he should make the first or second all-star team with the experience he has gained in his first year of competition.

Joe Smittle, star Buccaneer running guard, who placed fourth among the league scorers, was on the second mythical league team last year but was promoted this season to the first team because of consistently fine performances. The case of John Hurley, Xenia center, is perhaps the most remarkable of all. Although a senior this is also his first year as a regular. He was understudy to Bob Buell last season and in his first year as a regular to lead the entire league in scoring is a notable achievement anyway you consider it.

The league coaches who picked the all-star teams are: Walter C. "Pinky" Wilson, Xenia Central; Granville Robinson, Sidney; Earl Wright, Miami Springs; Eddie Stoltz, Greenville; W. A. Howard, Troy; and George Vertz, Piqua.

New Football Coach at U. of Pennsylvania

J. R. "Lud" Wray has been appointed as the new coach of football at the University of Pennsylvania, to succeed Lou Young, who resigned at the close of the present season. Wray was a star center and halfback at Pennsylvania during the years 1915 and 1916.

WILL BUY WHEAT TO STABILIZE MARKET

CHICAGO, March 1.—Secretary of Agriculture Arthur H. Hyde, chairman Alexander H. Legge and Samuel McKelvie of the federal farm board, were scheduled to arrive in Chicago today prepared to purchase 50,000,000 bushels of wheat, if necessary, and spend $60,000,000 to stabilize the American wheat market.

This stupendous plan of relief for the wheat farmer has the almost unanimous endorsement of agricultural leaders. Legge, it is understood, was given this support before leaving Washington to take charge of the farm board's battle against "bearish speculators" here.

The board, it is said, has already purchased 3,000,000 bushels of wheat which it has placed in storage. All was bought at a basic price of $1.25 a bushel in Minneapolis. The board, it is understood, will continue to buy at that figure until the general market reaches that level.

FOR THE LOVE OF PAT BY C. L. WEBB © 1929

CHAPTER XLVIII

The vagaries of the average young woman's heart, proclaim the experts, are many. True love, they say, hath a way for Mary Hathaway that for Susie Boles it hath not.

Without a well developed sense of humor, Margery Lynne would not have fallen in love with Jimmy Blair under the rather remarkable circumstances that prevailed. It was pity first, then knowledge of the heroic deed that had brought about his injury, the romanticism attached to his kidnapping and afterward acquaintance and liking for Pat.

Through it all, like the main thread in a fabric, ran the amusing notion that she might win Jimmy's love without his knowledge, during the period of his sub-consciousness, and when he was himself again—for Margery never doubted but what Jimmy would eventually "pick up the lost chord"—he would recognize in her, his affinity. None but a humorously inclined, highly developed imagination ever could have followed with such pertinacity of purpose, the line of thought that Margery consistently pursued. And it was owing to her own ingenious way of looking at life, and living, that she was able to obtain the joy she did out of her daily association with Jimmy and Pat.

During the first forty-eight hours after leaving New York the chill air of late February kept Pat and her friends a greater part of the time within the comfortable confines of the yacht's commodious cabin. A piano and a talking machine furnished music for dancing in the evening, and in dancing, eating, talking, card-playing and sleeping the hours flitted past so swiftly they could hardly realize the cruise was nearly two days old and that the Bluebird had made a run of 700 miles.

Margery and Lucy, coming into the cabin after a brisk exercise jaunt around the ship's promenade decks informed the half dozen still sitting around the breakfast table that "the weather outside is as soft and balmy as a day in June."

"Then it's me for the 'soft and balmy!'" averred Rex, hoping as he spoke that the "one girl" would express a like intention.

Which the "one girl" did. But Dr. Frank Gordon, on the following instant expressed himself also as being seized with a craving for the ocean breeze. Not only that, but he addressed his intention directly to the "one girl" with the added suggestion that they go after the breeze in company. And since, as the old saying has it, "two is company, but three is a crowd," the lieutenant's desire for the "soft and balmy" died virtually in its birthing.

While there had been no word spoken on the subject by either man since the brief for the taxicab, the heretofore mentioned "gentlemen's agreement" anent Pat and the "love game" second, in some way or another, by some sort of telepathically mutual understanding, to have been ejected into the limbo of discarded things. The barriers, obviously, had been raised; it was now each man for himself.

In his character of a friend, Dr. Frank Gordon was closer to Rex Dillard than any other living man. During their few months of intimate association he had come to know and like the young doctor for his many lovable qualities. He knew that Gordon was what he called a "square shooter." He knew, too, that in addition to being a "square shooter" the other was of a generous, broadminded and altogether unselfish nature, the kind of a man who takes real pleasure in helping others even when the helping entails a sacrifice on his part.

And yet, despite all this and more, despite the fact that he liked Gordon above all men and knew that Gordon liked him, probably, equally as well, he told himself as he watched this friend-rival pass out of the cabin with the "one girl" that he wished, most heartily wished that "the cuss would fall down and break his neck!"

Rex Dillard did not, of course, wish any such thing. He did wish, however, honestly and conscientiously, that the doctor could transfer his affections to some girl other than Pat—Lucy Pine, for instance. Lucy, Rex was sure, would make Gordon a wonderful wife. Oddly enough Dr. Frank Gordon, just the day before, had told him self almost identically the same thing only he had named Rex Dillard for Lucy.

But Pat—what did she think of them? That was the question Rex was the most disturbed about. In just what light was Gordon held, he wondered. In what light was he, Rex Dillard, held by this girl for whom he stood ready at any moment if the need presented itself, to give up his very life? How did she consider him? Did she like either one, Gordon or himself, any better than the other? She knew, of course, that both of them were deeply in love with her. A woman always knows whether a man loves her or not. If she did like one of them a little the best, which was it?

Rex had told himself time without number that nothing would ever induce him to ask for Pat Blair's hand in marriage. She had too much money, had been his cry to himself. Since Jimmy's restoration, however, his ideas on the subject had undergone something of a revision. He no longer felt so determined in regard to the money question. And anyhow, that was an after consideration. The important question now was: Did she give an eternal hoot for either of them, Gordon or he? If so, which?

That was the vital consideration right now. Did she care a tinker's darn for either of them and if so— which? He could, of course, ask her. But would that get him anything or anywhere? Wouldn't it be a fool thing to do—to precipitate matters by putting such a question to her bluntly—without any reason whatsoever for thinking she cared for him? If she ever had, or ever would give him any sign, any excuse to hope, then he would be justified. But until she did offer him something on which to feed a decent hope, his best plan of attack, to use a soldier's phrase, was "watchful waiting."

Having arrived at this very sensible conclusion, Rex felt much better. And since feeling better was equivalent to feeling fit, he felt the immediate need of a little exercise in the open air.

Reaching the main deck he looked forward and saw that which both puzzled and astonished him. Standing close to the port rail just opposite the pilot house were Margery and Jimmy Blair. The latter was leaning in a careless, perfectly natural man's pose against the rail and gazing, apparently, straight into the eyes of the girl, who stood directly in front of him. That which had struck Rex with such wonderment was the inconceivable fact that Margery was talking, fast, earnestly and directly to Jimmy; talking in just the same manner she might have been talking had he, Rex, or Dr. Gordon been standing in front of her instead of Jimmy. And the latter seemed at the same time to be listening. It was too much, Rex assured himself. He moved toward the pair.

"You don't mean to tell me, Margery," he said as he came within easy speaking distance, "that Jimmy has—"

She had turned at the first sound of his voice. Her face was flushed and her eyes sparkled. She cut into his query with a ripple of laughter and a quick answer.

"Jimmy's having the time of his young life, he says!" she declared with the most guileless air of cheerful insouciance possible to imagine. "The one thing that bothers him is that he hasn't the slightest idea in the world what I'm talking about! But that doesn't matter in the least. The important thing is that he likes being talked to. It doesn't, of course, make any difference to him what you talk about, just so it is talk and is addressed to him. I discovered the little fact yesterday and spoke to Pat about it. She thinks just as I do—that since he likes it we ought all of us to talk to him—talk just as we do to each other and as if he understood us!"

TAXI DRIVER FLEES FROM GUNMAN FARES

COLUMBUS, O., Mar. 1.—Rather than be a chauffeur to a pair of bandits, Keith Adams today was nursing cuts on his hands, which he sustained when he made a mad leap from his cab and a dash through a drugstore door. The robbers aided his speed by firing one shot at him.

Adams, an independent cab-driver, said the two men who entered his cab soon displayed revolvers. They demanded to be driven around town. At the first opportunity, the driver made a dash from the car and when the bandits fired at him, he took no time to open the drugstore door but hurried through the glass of the door.

The Theater

This column, at the risk of becoming hopelessly involved, attempts today to explain to a bored and skeptic audience the processes by which technicolor pictures become—well, technicolor.

One hundred feature productions are scheduled for this year and the early knell of the black and white film is being heard abroad the land. Technicolor is the result of the work of a group of scientists for the last decade. It is not entirely a photographic process. After the negative has been exposed it almost ceases to be photography at all and becomes something like a lithographic process, except that the colors are not set on by a heavy impression as in printing nor as they are laid on the making of a lithograph. They are put on by imbibition, the emulsion on the film drinking in the colors in the form of liquid dyes.

A technicolor negative differs very little from the ordinary movie negative except for some chemical treatment added to the usual photographic emulsion. It is twice as long, however, because two frames are exposed simultaneously instead of one.

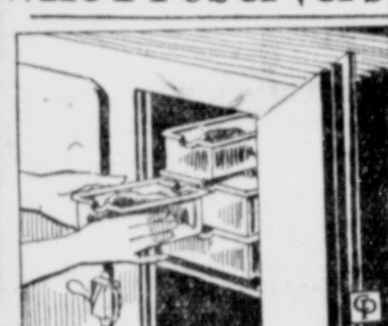

Behind the lens in the technicolor camera is a prism which splits the scene into two identical images. One image reaches the negative through a red filter. The other reaches the film through a blue filter. Thus there are on the negative two images, one right side up, the other bottom side up. Then a positive film, somewhat hardened by chemical action, is treated with hot water; then a green etching, or relief map of the scene, is recorded upon it. Next a "red" relief map is obtained by the same method on another positive film which has been exposed to the "red" part of the negative.

Neither is really red or green absolutely. "Red" meaning the warm colors of the spectrum and "green" the cold colors. The red side is orange red while the green side is a blue green. The two relief maps are the matrices from which are to be made the prints for distribution to the theaters.

With the matrices ready, a blank celluloid ribbon, which later becomes the film, is treated with gelatin so that it will readily accept color dyes in liquid form. Then the positive which bears the outlines of the red matrix is soaked with the requisite amount of dye and applied like a master printing plate to the blank strip of gelatin-coated celluloid. Both the matrix and blank are rigidly mounted on metal backings and the result is that the red parts of the image are impressed or printed on the gelatin coated celluloid film and the water drinks in from the red matrix all the color necessary to furnish the gradations of red required in the picture. The same process is repeated with that strip of positive film which has been exposed to the green portions of the negative and this green matrix is soaked with greenish dye and laid on the blank celluloid directly over the color which has already been imbibed from the red image. The gelatin coating then drinks in from the green matrix all the color necessary to furnish the required gradations or shades of green. The gelatin layer is interpenetrated with both dyes—red and green—in exactly the same proportions that those colored with their varying shades existed in the scenes ordinarily photographed.

FEMALE JEKYLL AND HYDE SNOOK VICTIM

while maintained a nonchalance which had been baffling, broke down, and, in a dramatic climax, confessed he had violently ended the life of his illicit companion.

In his written confession, Snook declared the killing followed an argument which started when he informed his sweetheart he intended to take his wife and baby out of town over the week-end. He claimed Miss Hix threatened to kill Mrs. Snook and their baby daughter if he departed with his family. Snook alleged the code reached for her pocketbook, in which she was accustomed to carry a revolver. A struggle ensued and the doctor, he asserted in his confession, picked up a hammer which he had in his coupe—after Miss Hix had threatened, "Damn you, I'll shoot you—and your wife and baby, too"—and struck his companion on the head, intending to stun her. Other blows from the hammer, seventeen in all—followed. The girl's body slumped from the car to the ground. Then realizing that he had fractured her skull, the university instructor continued to confess, he bent over the young woman as she lay beside the coupe, and slashed her jugular vein with his pocket knife. He said he wanted to "end her suffering."

In an interview with newspapermen, later, Snook announced Miss Hix died "fighting and cursing him."

The doctor, in his confession of record, stated he had known his sweetheart three years "in a very intimate way," because, he asserted, "she was a very good companion." He amplified that statement by saying their association was not "a silly love affair," that he highly respected his wife who "lacked some of the companionship afforded by Miss Hix."

The other woman in the case—Mrs. James Howard Snook—attempted to establish an alibi for her husband on the night of the crime, when he was first taken into custody. Her story, when she was subjected to a real, though sympathetic questioning, was shattered.

Justice moved swiftly after the professor confessed the murder of his pupil-paramour. Just one week after the body of Miss Hix had been found, Snook was arraigned and within less than seven hours he had been indicted by the grand jury on a charge of first-degree murder. The defense attempted to delay the trial, but the court sustained the objections of the state and Snook went on trial July 24. He was convicted August 14, on the charge of inhumanly ending the life of his pseudo-wife, after one of the most sordid proceedings in an American hall of justice.

While not denying killing his co-ed sweetheart, Snook, during his trial, contended he didn't remember details of his confession, declaring he struck her with his hammer because she had subjected him to excruciating pain while they were parked on the deserted rifle range. Unemotionally and without the slightest trace of compunction, the doctor mercilessly attacked the reputation of his dead sweetheart-paramour. The testimony couldn't be printed. The court, in sentencing the convicted murderer, scathingly rebuked the man for his "unjustified" attack on the character of Miss Hix. (Snook, following his conviction, "confessed" he had lied on the witness stand when he accused Miss Hix of abnormal practices.)

The defense contended Snook, because he had been allegedly "attacked" by his companion in the parked automobile, became insane and that he beat her in self-defense.

But the jury thought otherwise. After deliberating the remarkably short time of twenty-eight minutes, the jurors returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, with no recommendation for mercy. That decision automatically subjected Snook to a sentence of death in the electric chair.

The execution date was originally set for November 29. Attorneys for the doomed man succeeded in securing three stays of execution—until February 28 when James Howard Snook was hurried into eternity for having brutally battered and slashed his co-ed sweetheart to her horrifying death.

RAT POPULATION OF COUNTY IS IN DANGER

An effort to reduce the number of Greene County's worst animal pests—the rat—is being conducted by County Agent E. A. Drake in cooperation with M. P. Jones, state entomologist, of Ohio State University, Thursday and Friday of this week.

Demonstrations on the control and destruction of rats and other rodent pests of the farm are being held at various places over the county. Thursday Mr. Jones talked to the Agricultural class at Alpha and Xena Central High Schools.

Mr. Jones told the pupils that the data obtained by the U. S. Biological survey shows that each rat costs the farmer $2 per year to keep and that on many farms if the grain eaten and wasted by rats could be sold, the proceeds would more than pay all the farmer's taxes.

For centuries the world has been fighting rats and at the same time has been feeding them and building for them fortresses for concealment, he said. To fight them efficiently they must be denied food and hiding places. He discussed and demonstrated various methods of destroying rodents, which included traps, poison baits, natural enemies and poison gases. Calcium cyanide dust is effective as a gas and can be used to kill rats in almost any hiding place.
